

SECTION 06

Incoming transmission:

Propel your space mobile ahead on a course consistent with your previous direction. The distance ahead is long and tedious, requiring fortitude and perseverance. A period of hyper-sleep may be necessary while traversing this vast expanse of space. However, vigilance is always required in the event of unforeseen circumstances.

Ahead lies the True-key neutral zone (TNZ), which cannot be crossed without paying homage to the cosmic gatekeeper. Upon Approach to the TNZ, steer your space mobile into the landing area and dock in an official holding slip. You will encounter many aliens from different parts of the galaxy. Avoid eye contact, for they can be fierce and chatty. You must focus on your mission at hand.

As you approach the gate, descend below where the sun's powerful rays cannot penetrate. Beware of hideous creatures that guard the gatekeeper's lair, for they may attempt to deny you passage. Once you have come face to face with the gatekeeper, repeat the following phrase: "Pass the tanning butter". Grab the gatekeeper by the throat and he will relinquish the key to continue.

Return to your spacemobile, cross the TNZ, and continue on your journey back to earth.

SECTION 04

Incoming transmission:

Due to a rogue asteroid cluster, you are forced to take a historic route originally forged by Commodore Tod Goodwin many decades ago. Technology of the day was not very advanced and Goodwin's ship was powered by steam.

Traveling on a steamer from Uranus could take a long time and people were quite relieved when they rose from their seats after the expedition.

From your current position, continue on the course of 50-degree heading. You will traverse a very congested corridor of space junk, strange organic matter, and unexplained intergalactic phenomena. After approximately 9.7 million miles, steer your spacemobile on a starboard heading of 89 degrees for an additional 3 million miles. Take extreme caution, as there are false indicators that may lead you to undesirable destinations. Historic records reveal the site you must reach.

You will now approach an abandoned alien space station constructed by three ancient tribes. It is imperative that you show respect to the heritage of their alien ways. This is accomplished by chanting a traditional hymn of the blacksmith. You will be rewarded with a talisman to continue your journey. But, first you must follow the path to the steamer to obtain your coordinates. Sentries still roam the area and have been known to discharge discipline to any disrespectful behavior. Tread lightly and sing loudly.

I. Seymour
Butts

EXPLORING URANUS: A Love Story

EXPLORING URANUS: A Love Story

I. Seymour Butts

THE CRITICS LOVE EXPLORING URANUS

*I could not tear myself away from Exploring Uranus

- Dick Bottoms

Exploring Uranus was sheer delight, inside and out*

- Annie Feltcher

Exploring Uranus sucked me in and never let go*

-Pinkie Brown

I have recommended Exploring Uranus to all my friends

-Deepak Phister

Exploring Uranus is fun for people of all ages.*

Grandpa loved it.

-Whitey Cummings

Exploring Uranus opened up a vast new world to me*

-Charmin Flushing

*Dock your spacemobile in the proper space
And pursue your trek by boat
Look around but don't forget you're in a race
To sightsee, the effort's moot*

*Search for a skeleton made of iron and steel
Not far off the beaten trail
Its parts, with eyes and with hands both look and feel
Persist and you cannot fail*

*When found, your clue will tell you where to go
And sing for all that you're worth
You'll get a reward that tells next where to flow
In your journey back to Earth*

Uranus is a long way from home
Be careful not to get lost
The warrior way is how you should roam
Or else you may pay the cost

Now you must search for pages en masse
And seek the knowledge inside
Deep within the walls you must not pass
Look up, down and side to side

Begin the search inside right away
You don't need to go too far
Show proper respect during your stay
And try not to leave a scar

Look for a book that appeals to you
You'll know it is yours when seen
Open it up and gather your crew
Its knowledge carefully glean

Do do do da da da da da
Bumbledy bumbledy boo
Think with your brain and eyes, not your jaw
Uranus knows what to do